

Dawson

Graphic user interface allows a person to interact through what they can see using visual indicators and are used so that they can simplify the processes of code, whereas command line interface is the interface that allows for the interacting of code with the use of commands.